BEFORE PUBLISHING YOUR ETD IN AUETD . . .

This information has been prepared to help you and your advisor make informed decisions about whether to 1) publish your ETD in AUETD immediately; or 2) limit access to your ETD in AUETD. Publication of your ETD in AUETD is an academic requirement and cannot be postponed indefinitely.

ACCESS/PUBLICATION RESTRICTIONS

- Some commercial and academic publishers are reluctant to publish a thesis or dissertation if it has first been published electronically in AUETD. Therefore, if you plan to publish your ETD elsewhere at a later date, you should consider limiting access to your ETD in AUETD for one of the allowable time periods.
- UNLIMITED ACCESS: Publication in AUETD is immediate and irreversible. Once your ETD is submitted and published electronically in AUETD, it is accessible immediately to anyone with access to the World Wide Web. Therefore, you cannot decide afterward to limit access to your ETD. The decision to publish immediately in AUETD may have consequences if you later plan to publish your ETD elsewhere.

LIMITING ACCESS TO YOUR ETD IN AUETD – EMBARGO OPTIONS

- WITHHELD ACCESS. You can request that access be withheld to all users for a limited period of time. This option prevents anyone from viewing your ETD in AUETD. This option excludes you (the author), your advisors, committee members, people who you may want to write letters of recommendation for you, family members—EVERYONE.
- LIMITED ACCESS TO AUBURN USERS: You can request that access be limited to Auburn users (anyone with a valid AU ID userid and password) for a limited period of time. Even if you limit access to your ETD, basic bibliographical information about your ETD, including the abstract, will be published immediately in AUETD's searchable database.
- LIMITED ACCESS FOR A PERIOD OF TIME. You can limit access to your ETD in AUETD for one of the following time periods:
 - Six months
 - One year
